No one should act upon this information without seeking professional counsel. Please be aware that if you communicate with us by e-mail or otherwise in connection with a matter for which we do not already represent you, your communication may not be treated as privileged or confidential. If you communicate with us by e-mail in connection with a matter for which we already represent you, your communication may not be treated as privileged or confidential. If you communicate with us by e-mail in connection with a matter for which we already represent you, please remember that Internet e-mail is not secure and you may wish to take steps to encrypt sensitive or confidential materials before sending them on the Internet.

In some jurisdictions this site may be considered advertising. The hiring of a lawyer is an important decision that should not be based solely upon advertisements. Before you decide, ask us to send you free written information about our qualifications and experience.

E-Mail Disclaimer

Electronic mail may not be confidential. You should never send confidential or sensitive information by electronic mail except when you have a pre-existing relationship with the person to whom you are sending the communication, and that person has a contractual or other legal obligation to keep the communication confidential, and you have taken steps to encrypted the e-mail so that a third person who may intercept it cannot read it. You should recognize that electronic mail may be stored and forwarded through several computer systems, and it is possible that someone may (illegally) read your e-mail and disclose it to someone.

Do not provide any confidential information to someone by electronic mail or voice mail if you are not certain that they will maintain the information as confidential. If you are seeking legal advice and you send e-mail to or leave a message for an attorney whom you have not already retained, you may later discover that this attorney represents someone else in the same case, and the attorney may have a duty to disclose your information to that client. Although communications between an attorney and client are confidential, your communication is not confidential if you are not the attorney's client or if your communication is made in a setting where others are likely to receive it.

Thus, if we have not already agreed to act as your attorney, you must not assume that we will agree to do so or to keep confidential information that you send us. You also must not assume that our receipt of information from you will prevent us from representing someone else involved in any matter you disclose or from sharing the information you send with that party.

Deadlines are extremely important in most legal matters. You may lose important legal rights if you do not hire an attorney immediately to advise you with your legal needs. Many people, including many attorneys, do not check their e-mail daily, and some attorneys do not respond to unsolicited e-mail from non-clients.
